My Birth-Day.

"My birth-day!"—What a different sound
That word had in my youthful ears!
And how, each time the day comes round,
Less and less its mark appears!

When first our scanty years are told,
It seems like pastime to grow old;
And youth counts the shining links
That time around him binds so fast,
Pleased with the task he little thinks
How hard that chain will press at last.

Vain was the man, and false as vain,
Who said, "were he ordained to run
His long career of life again,
He would do all that he had done."—
Ah! 'tis not thus the voice that dwells
In sober birth-days speaks to me;
Far otherwise—of time it tells
Lavished unwisely, carelessly—
Of council mock'd—of talents made
Happy for high and pure designs,
But oft, like Israel's incense laid
Upon unholy, earthly shrines—
Of nursing many a wrong desire—
Of wandering after love too far,
And taking every meteor, fire
That cross'd my path-way for his star!
And this it tells, and conld I trace
The imperfect pictnre o'er again,
With power to add, retouch efface
The lights add shades, the joy and pain,
How little of the past would stay!
How quickly all should melt away—
All—but that freedom of the mind
Which hath been more than wealth to me;
These friendships in my boyhood twined,
And kept till now unchangingly,
And that dear home, the saving ark,
Where love's true light at last I've found,
Cheering within, when all grows dark,
And comfortless, and stormy round!

Selected Story.

A Situation.

She stood at the crossing of the village street just as the shower came down: It had been a rainy morning, the drops filtering playfully through the clouds, interspersed with dazzling outbursts of sunshine, but now a pelting, merciless torrent rushed sharply downward, gathering vehemence from past delay.

And there stood Bessy in the midst of it, one pretty foot stretched doubtfully outward to feel for a stepping stone amidst the torrent that swept over the crossing.

Quite by accident, of course, young Browaly, dawdling at the depot, in doubt whether to take the next train, caught sight of this vision, as he drummed with idle fingers on th gray green panes of the waiting room. It was quite by accident also, of course, that in a second after this he was crossing the street a little further up, armed with a big umbrella. As Bessie, still doubtful, glanced ruefully about to see if she could reach the nearest tree, or had better brave it out, this stranger, picking his way through mud and wet, stood by her side.

Now we know that it does not do for a woman to overstep conventional limits; she must keep to the bars of her gilded cage, and twitter happily behind them. To allow a gentleman to speak to her without an introduction, even if he were on a raft, while she would be floating by going politely to the bottom, would be a thing of very doubtful etiquette. But down came the shower, and there stood Bessie without an umbrella. Under some circumstances, it must be owned, conventionalism makes a poor show beside savageism, and young Brownley, having more or les of savage lingering about him, proffered his umbrella. It was promptly accepted by the girl, who had evidently far less regard for the proprietors of life than for her dripping dress.

"Oh, dear!" she said, "it's completely spoiled, I suppose. This is the second time I've started out to see poor little Tom, and been stopped by the rain. I hope it won't rain this way every afternoon."

"I almost hope that it will," said her companion, glancing at the bright, flushed face beside him. "I always carry an unbrella."

Now it must be confeessed that this commendable prudence and foresight had sprung up in the young man within the last ten minutes. But what of that? Reforms must begin at some time, I presume.

I have observed that, as a rule, most heroes of romance are well provided for. They have a higher sphere of troubles than the mere harassment of looking for bread and butter. And right enough it should be so, say I. It is a pity if we cannot have a place of refuge, between book covers at least, where the contemptible common-place of life is not thrust upon us. All hail to the heroes with rich uncles and old aunts, and good-humored mole-eyed grandmothers, and forth-coming legacies! I'm sorry I can't place my hero among them; but he's an intensely every day fellow, not fit for high society. He hasn't even a distant relative in India with one foot in the grave.

The fact is, the youth had actually come up to Evansville looking for a situation in a big country store of Vander & Co., and what is more he'd been refused it.

But here, however, with the incorrigible hoplefulness of youth, he walked along beside Bessy, and forgot all about it. He expected to leave her at some cottage gate near by, and he did presently. A pretty low-roofed house stood just in sight, with a row of red and white hollyhocks nodding up to its eaves. A scarlet runner, dipping and shing in the shower, half hid a little window facing on the lane, wherein a fantastic assemblage of spools beads, and jars of confectionary looked out with an eye of trade.

This girl flung open the gate.

"Won't you walk in?" she said: "Aunt Polly will be glad to see you."

"No, thank you," said the young man, staring stupidly after her, as she disappeared among the hollyhocks.

"Lives there, does she?" he said, contemplating the tiny shop-window. "I'm too late for the train to-day. Guess I'll call to-morrow. Wonder if they keep fishing lines?"

The next morning, after lounging about the village, and trying vainly to get a sense of his situation, or rather want of one, young Brownly brushed his coat with extraordidary care.

"No signs of a shower to-day," he said, as he strolled up the road. "Wonder if I'd better take the train?"

And with that he turned up the lane toward the little shop. A clean old woman, in a wide frilled cap and wrinkled face, sat rocking herself in the doorway. She looked up as the gate latch clicked a great cat purring at her feet rose sleepily, curling its tail, as the intruder entered. "Fishing lines?" The old woman set about a fumbling, spectacle search among her motly stock, but none were to be found. He could get them up at Squire Vander's big store in the village. Ah! well; the young man recolected just then that he wanted some thread. He was often in want of a bit to sew on a button with. "Poor young fellow!" said Aunt Polly to herself, commiserately; "boarding, I suppose!" And needles, would he have needles? He couldn't get no better than her'n any where. No to be sure not. And while the old woman was putting up a parcle sufficient to restore all the stray buttons in Christendom, her customer sat expectant, waiting, but not for the package; perhaps a trim little figue might suddenly alight in the room, coming in from among the hollyhocks, or tripping daintily down the old stairway just visible beyond.

"Did—did your daughter get very wet?" he inquired, very abruptly at last, considering how long he had been contemplating the query.

"Sairy Jane? I havn't seen her today; but their house do leak some, that's certain, which is bad for Tom, who's got the whoop—"

But suddenly the old lady grew enlightened. Her spectacles seemed to enlarge themselves. The frill on her cap widened out interrogatively.

"Bless my soul!" she said, "what upon airth am I thinking of, to be sure! I do get things a little confused, what with so many inquiring arter Sairy Jane and Tom. And you be the young man that see her home with the umbrella?—Miss Vander, I mean. Oh, bless your heart! she only stopped here to ask after Tom, and to get in out of the wet; though she did match some worsteds, I I rec'lect, and, what's more, left them behind her when she hurried off arter the shower.—I,d be obliged to you, sir, if you're going that way, to let her know they're all safe."

Going that way! The young man lingered as he closed the gate, and the sense of his poverty and idleness did come upon him then with a deadly weight. What matter to him, or to any one which way he drifted! As he walked down the path among Aunt Polly's hollyhocks, he could have found it in his heart to envy the old woman her quiet little wayside nook, and the undisturbed certainty of her homely existence.

So it was Squire Vander's daughter he had escorted so bravely with the umbrella. Squire Vander, who owned, as Aunt Polly had told him, "no end of lands in these parts" "What a fool I am to be lingering about here!" thought our friend as he wandered on; "I'll be off by the next train."

But then, hadn't he a commission to Miss Vander, wasn't he charged with a message for her, and wasn't business business? He heard the resounding whistle of the train as it swept out of sight while he still loitered. He passed the Squire's big mansion wistfully. What right had he to look in at the pickets—a poor wandering waif that would shortly be in want of a breakfast? The great fields of waving corn goldened in the sunlight, the orchards on the slopes hung lustily ripe with fruit, and under the trees here and there the cattle stood cooling themselves in the shade and lazily whisking off the flies; a pretty sun-lighted scene, where probably no comfortable farmer, no hospitable house-mistress, would have conceived it possible that the decently dressed young man strolling idly by was without a dollar in his pocket or an object in the world.

Object! Oh, well, perhaps not exactly that. Not if one can translate that gleam in the young man's eyes, as through the trees that skirts Squire Vander's lawn he catches a glimpse of a pretty figure in fluttering muslin, sitting and swaying itself leisurely in a great swing under the boughs of a spreading oak; to and fro, to and fro, the airy figure flits, the leaf shadows embroidering her white dress, and glints of sunlight spangling her braided hair. Should he venture in? He stood irresolute, and as he stood there came an irruption of small boys through a side gate—a pack of hungry youngsters just let out of school.

"I say, Bessy, is dinner ready?" they cried.

"Come here and give me a swing," answered Bessy, inconsequently.

As they approached the boys caught sight of the watchful, wayworn face peering through the shrubbery.

"Why, that's the chap was down at the store after a situation!" cried Jack, Jim, and Jerry in chorus.

Bessy turned hastily; she knew her friend of yesterday in a moment. "Oh, come in! come in!" she cried. "I ought to have thanked you for your kindness last night.

"I just—just missed the train," said the traveler, startled out of his self-possession, and naturally, under the circumstances, giving utterances to the first fib that suggested itself.

"Going away? Why, don't you find it pleasant here?"

"Very pleasant, but—"

"But the hotel and boarding-houses are all full, I suppose."

"To tell you the truth," burst out the young man, won to strange confidence by the frank eyes looking out at him, and speaking out the bitterness of his heart, "it would make very little difference in my case—they'd crowd me out, whether or no, for I couldn't pay for a room."

Not pay for a room! Bessy's eyes looked up at the broad front of her father's house, where door and window stood open free and spacious. So much room and to spare, while others were so straitened. But the shadow on her face was quickly turned to a smile at beholding the alacrity with which Jack, Jim, and Jerry had monopolized the wing.

"Now there's a fellow could give us a regular toss all together!" cried little Jack, his merry black eyes looking out toward the tall figure at the gate.

There is no resisting fate, and before he knew it Mr. Brownley was fairly in that sacred inclosure, the leaf shadows fluttering over his tall figure, and over Bessy's arch face, and over the rosy merry boys, as they swung, laughing, skyward, sent up with a will, once, twice, and rgain. And while they were all thus merrily engaged, and elderly gentleman with an ivory headed cane came walking up the path.

"Father," said Bessy, soberly, "this is the young gentleman who was so kind as to help me in the rain yesterday."

"And such a fellow to lift!" cried Jack, as he came down from his ride in the tree tops.

"Ah," said the old gentleman, eying the youth sharply, "Mr. Brownley, whom I saw yesterday, I believe."

"He's a regular brick, father!" cried Jack. "Such a swing! If you take him in the store, it'll be jolly—then we can swing every day!"

"Ay, ay," said Mr. Vander, smiling as his young people clung about him—"ay, ay, to be sure, that's all young folks think about nowadays—a jolly time! Well, well, come in to dinner, Mr. Brownley, and we'll talk the matter over. And so you thought it no harm to try again. Nothing like perseverence, my lad!"

Mr. Brownley did not state that he came with a message from Aunt Polly. Perhaps he forgot to deliver it altogether. I am not sure.

But this I can affirm, that in the annals of Evansville it is related that the successful Mr. Brownley, the honored and honorable Mr. Brownley, rose to his present estate from a very humble position—a mere place behind a counter—and, as some hint, by first securing a place in Bessy Vander's heart, which situation, I understand, he holds this day.

Novels and Novel Reading.

BY AN ORTHODOX CLERGYMAN.

The tongue of Solomon must have been touched by prophetic fire when he said, "Of making many books there is no end." Truly the statement is verified in our own day. Thousands of weak brains and strong brains are gathering thoughts; thousands of slow fingers and swift fingers are penning lines that are destined to run out into lengthy manuscripts; thousands of printers are setting type; thousands of books are issuing from thousands of presses; and being borne by rapid post to all parts of civilization: books aglow with poetic fire; books of abstruse ethics, passionless as an Arctic iceberg; books of sober truth; books of ideal fancy; books that tell of earth around and earth beneath; books that describe sublime journeys of mind through the fields of space, portraying the lovely flowers that bloom forever in the paradise of God.

Fully two-thirds of all these books are novels. These find purchosers in every family and readers at every fireside. Universally they contribute very materially to the mental and moral elevation or degration of the race. It behoves us, therefore, to enquire if they teach lessons of good or evil.

Fictitious naratives are not evil in themselves. There is fullest authority for their use in the word of God. The beautiful fiction of the talking trees occurs in the book of Judges, and the inimitable parable of the man of Uz and his friends in the book of Job; while the prophets, in their transcendental descriptions of the hereafter, employ ideal scenes to represent coming events; and, turning to the New Testament, it is recorded of Him who "spoke as never man spoke before," that "without a parable spake He not unto them." "A parable is a moral lesson inculcated by the invention of characters which never existed; or if they ever existed, are made to converse in forms of speech suggested entirely by the imagination." Without an invented story Jesus seldom taught the people. The story of Dives and Lazarus, the Pharisee and publican, and the fifty-one other parables of Jesus are just as much works of fiction as are the romances of Cooper and Bulwer. He discarded the dogmas of the rabbis at Jerusalem and talked to the people in their own vernacular. Inventing stories that bore upon their every day life, the Master brought His truths into the homes, into the business, into the habits, into the religion of His countrymen. When we go to the Bible for advice as to Christian conduct, we invariably seek one of these parables. Jesus, then, inculcated by practice the sacredness of employing the unreal to represent the real. "The servant is not above his master." That which Jesus did others may surely imitate. Those who teach morals would do well to sit at His feet and learn of Him the best way to reach the hearts of their hearers.

Believing that novels possess the Divine sanction, I have always employed them as aids in my ministerial work, and have found them to be most efficient coadjutors. Their style is peculiarly adapted to the literary tastes of the masses—the romantic sentiment which pervades them is in harmony with the idealism of men. Especially do they reach the young: those who walk the May-fields of life cull only such flowers as breathe of passionate love and hate, and to them the "lotus fruits of imagination" as sewed by the dainty hands of romancers are far more palatable than the substantial food of sober reality. Some men can't think; they are unable to grasp the great truths of physical and moral science, and the only way to reach them is through the emotional. There are others who will not think; they refuse history because it demands thought, and science because it demands investigation. To all of these novels come as actual instructors. And how strongly they appeal to our sympathies. When "Old Curiosity Shop" appeared, how many tears were shed over the divine Nell, found dead on her humble conch beneath the snow and ivy! Ah! thousands of homes had lost their little Nell, and mourning ones heard over again the "remorseless toll of the funeral bell" for their loved and lost.

Good novels are colporteurs of society, going from house to house, preaching silently yet grandly, reaching men that the Bible never reached, talking to men to whom the preacher never talks. We should not condemn all novels because some of them are evil. Food should not be despised because some men are buttons, nor wine because some get drunk. It is most true that novels have done much towards impairing the mental and moral strength of our people, but many, very many, of them, by adhering to elegance of style, by inculcating noble lessons of truth, and showing triumphs of virtue over vice, have done much towards advancing our race in mind and morals—have accomplished a work scarcely inferior to the ministry itself.

Nashville American.

A young lady in Council Bluffs, when informed by her supposed lover that he was going to cease his suit, cowhided him all around the room, and, as he disappeared through the window, declared that she would teach him to be careful how he trifled with a gentle and loving heart in future.

"Have you seen my black-faced antelope?" inquired Mr. Leoscope who had a collection of animals, of his friend Bottlejack. "No, I havn't. Whom did your black-faced aunt elope with?"

A Kansas girl wouldn't be married without a yellow ribbon round her waist, and a boy rode eight miles to get it while the guests waited.

THE LESSON OF THE ELECTION.

Our recent defeat was not caused by the superior numbers of the enemy but two many of our soldiers were asleep on their post of duty. We should prefer to to have it otherwise, but, after all, the lesson is a good one and ought, as we believe it will, to make Republicans more vigilant in the future. They must not expect to win victories by sleeping at their post. If they expect to hold their own they must exercise as much activity as their opponents. In the late election they did not. The Democrats worked hard, and deserves, so far as a reward of effort goes, the victory they won.

The numerical strength of a party amounts to nothing unless it is brought out when needed. We have lost this District, and the State, not because the Democrats really outnumbered us, but because they got out a larger proportion of their vote than we did of ours. But the Republican army remains intact. It will require a few extra sacrifies to regain what has been lost, but the next battle will find every man to the front to guard against surprise or defeat. A threatened danger unites the party strength. Over confidence in our power is apt to beget apathy, and too often leads to defeat. The next time we face Democracy we must show it that half our forces are out asleep In the mean while we shall not begrudge them the little, encouragement they have received.

TO THOSE WHO CAN UNDERSTAND IT

Men whoes instincts are honorable, and who possess any independence of character whatever, would not think, under any circumstances, of masquerading in the good name of others. If they could not attract decent attention without stealing the decent clothes of others, they would prefer to live in obscurity. When society outlaws a man, he does not better his cause by whining like a whipped spaniel just outside the gates, and trying to sneak inside at every opportunity in all kinds of disguises. Society is forced to admire a man of sterling independence, even if she does not invite him to take a seat within the charmed circle. But she despises those who swagger and boast of their independence, and who at the same time try to elevate themselves into respectable society by simply standing before the public in borrowed or stolen clothes. When a vulgar fellow purloins from the wardrobe of a gentleman a dress coat, he does not make a gentlemen of himself by the easy process of putting the coat on his back. The man of true independence asks to be judged on his own merits, be these merits great or small, He would scorn the very idea of asking to be judged on the new clothes of another.

OBLIGED TO WORK.

"Formerly they were in the enjoyment of great wealth, and now, in consequence of the war, they are reduced to the actual necessity of working for a living. Two of the daughters have opened a school, and work like slaves."—Extract from a letter.

The condition of the family thus brought to our notice is not peculiar, and it touches our sympathy only as it is followed up by the statement that it is very hard to find work to do, and the young ladies cannot secure scholars enough to make their labor profitable.

We know hundreds, and there are hundreds of thousands of families who work for a living, as we do, and do not find it irksome, or a hardship, or an evil. Ill requited labor is very hard to bear. But it is better for the body and the soul, for the family and the State, that all should have work to do, and do it. Life is more enjoyable; even the sleep to the laboring man is sweeter than that of the idle, and play is more delightful that follows upon work. So that being "obliged to work" is not such a dreadful thing after all. Thank God for something to do. Do it with a will. And great will be your reward.

THE MAJORITY IN THE DISTRICT

Below we give the majorities for Congress in this District :

| | COBB. | YEATES. |

| Bertie | 376. | ..... |

Man has no right to allow one of his talents to be buried. The battle of life demands the exertion of his every power, offensive and defensive. God and mankind need its use. There is just mental and physical force enough in the world, when well husbanded, to do the world's work, and there should be no needless expenditure of it.

CARELESS WASTE.

A great majority of farmers are very indifferent and careless about utilizing the most valuable fertilizers. They are in the habit of collecting all the weeds, grass, rakings of lawns and walks, and dumping the accumulations in the road, or in some unoccupied corner, where they aid in promoting the same luxuriant growth of large weeds or worthless grass. All such collections are the cream of the soil. This is particularly true in respect to grass and leaves. Both leaves and grass contain a generous proportion of potash, silica and other valuable fertilizing substances, which if allowed to decay on cultivable ground, would improve its productiveness in proportion to the quantity applied. Leaves will yield a larger percentage of potash than grass. If leaves and grass, and all other accumulations of one's yard and walks, were spread around fruit trees or around berry bushes, the decayed vegetable material will not only promote a healthy growth of wood, but will improve the size and fairness of the fruit. All fruit trees, berry bushes and grape vines need a supply of potash. If the soil near them is covered every season with leaves and grass, the mulching will operate on the productiveness of trees and vines similar to an application of potash.

BEECHER'S DEFENSE

HENRY WARD BEECHER has made his statement. It is very lengthy but is earnest and able. It covers the whole ground. The explicit, comprehensive and solemn denial of TILTON'S charges which he had already made is repeated with greater emphasis. It is summed up in these words, in which all the force of language is embodied: "At no interview which ever took place between Mrs. TILTON and myself did anything occur which might not have occurred with perfect propriety between a brother and sister, between a father and child or between a man of honor and the wife of his dearest friend."

In the language of the Boston Transcript. it is a strange tale on his showing of the misplaced, generous, even rash confidence of a noble nature, entangled and caught in the toils of intrigue and conspiracy. If it be a very sad and sorrowful revelation it is, on the face of it, manly and brave. That it will satisfy all it were too much to anticipate, in view of the conflicting opinions and feelings that have been engendered by the complications of the controversy, and that it will be sharply criticised, is to be expected. But its aspect is certainly that of an honest and fearless statement, wrung from a heart terribly cheated and deceived in its friendships, and baffled in its long-continued and magnanimous, though unwise, efforts to serve and protect others.

A candle hid under a bushel gives no light. The purest gold, buried away in the deep recesses of some mountain's strata, or the finest gems hidden down among the sands of the ocean's bed, can purchase no comforts. or please no taste. SAMPSON bound, became the sport of Phylistine maidens, and was mocked by Phylistine boys. The terrible threats of the Cyclopean giant, deprived of sight, could safely be echoed by the laughter of his tormentors. Unuttered thought disturbs no error, attacks no folly, does nothing for mankind. It is vital words and brave deeds that moves the world. The true scholar not only coins thought but he circulates it. The proper measure of a man is what he does, rather than what he is.

The Mobile Register takes some of the Nothern Journals to task because they have advised the white agriculturists of the South not to quarrel with their colored laborers. The advice was given in the interest of the whole country, whose prosperity is directly affected by any internal dissention. ### A Correction.

REYNOLDSON, GATES CO., N. C. }
August 12th, 1874. }

To the Editor of the North Carolinian.

In your issue of the 5th inst., the following appeared in your columns: "There was a public collection taken up, (the hat passed around,) at the Reynoldson Church in Gates county on the 18th of July for the avowed purpose of assisting Maj. Yeates in the canvass of the District."

When churches shall have so far lost their respect for the religion of Jesus Christ as to meddle with politics, it will be well to make it known to the public. But in regard to the above piece we wish to state, 1st that no meeting was held in the place that day; 2nd. that no such thing has ever occurred in Reynoldson at any time; and 3rd. that the piece is a palpable falsehood, and the writer, if he has no respect for religion nor the church at Reynoldson, should have had more self-respect than to have signed his name "Truth."

The Crime and the Criminal.

THE CASE CLOSED—PENALTIES THAT MUST FOLLOW THE TRANSGRESSION,

To the Editor of the Tribune.

SIR: In spite of the cloud of suspicion, misunderstanding, and falshood which Theodore Tilton and his trained band of gossips succeeded in throwing aroond Mr. Beecher, and the premature crystallization in public sentiment which the delay in the Committee's work brought about. Mr. Beecher's statement carries its own weight and will be accepted by the law-abiding and Christian public as the true version of this singular story which has made the wildest flights of fiction seem dull and commonplace in comparison. The case is ended. The testimony of Mr. Tilton's only witness has found its way to the public ear, and has fallen dead. The circumstances of its apbearance and the business reputation and bearing of the man combine to render it worthless. So that even if Mr. Tilton chooses to drag his exploed case into the courts, the virdict of the public can hardly be affected.

The case ends; but its penalties ought not to and cannot end. Accepting, as the public will, Mr. Beecher's frank and full statement, what is the record of Mr. Tilton? To the severe and merciless eye of society, he stands convicted of crimes for which no legal punishment can be inflicted, but which will bring upon him that lasting and passionless social retribution which the felon in chains is seldom so unfortunate as to incur. He is morally guilty of forgery, for he has garbled letters and found on their misconstruction a blow at a reputation dear to the whole Christain wordl; of perjury, for he has heaped falshood on falshood mountain high; of conspiracy, for if ever an infamous plot stood reveal'd in broad day, this was one; of levying black-mail; of torturing a sick wife into self-accusation and fouling the reputation of the mother of his children, coining money, meanwhile, out of her dishonor; of making this deadly assault on the man who had been his benefactor and friend from youth, to whom he owed the fame, position, and prosperity, which he had neither the wit nor the discretion to keep, and lastly, of nourishing, increasing, and stirring up this tide of scandal until it looked so swollen and black that it is not so wonderful, after all, that the man on whose head it was to fall shrank back in fear. Such a series of crimes will bring its own punishment. There is no need of indictment or prosecution to make Theodore Tilton feel the penalty that must attach to his offenses. But beyond this, society owes to itself, and inexorably exacts the full measure of its own unwritten law "An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth," is the mandate of civilization as it was of antiquity. The man who first undermined and tried to explode the reputation of his wife and children's mother; who not only played the traitor to his wife but the assassin to his friends who spurned and spit upon the duties of husband and father, can be nothing hereafter but an outcast and an outlaw. He does not and cannot belong in the company of mothers and chibdren, and his name must be henceforth a stench in the nostrils of all good men and women.

As for the people who have been the instruments in sowing his crop of slander and without malice, no doubt, and others fully conscious of the guilt of their transgression, leave them to their own consciences. If they still retain them, that will be punishment enough.

New-York, Aug. 14, 1874.

Involuntary Bankruptcy

In answer to a correspondent, who enquires 'whether the new bankrupt act, providing in cases of involuntary bankruptcy, the payment of debts in any proportion on the assent of creditors not to be necessary to discharge, is applicable to pending cases begun before the 1st of December, 1873, the Philadelphia Ledger says: 'The law provides that in case of involuntary bankruptcy the payment of the debts in any proportion, on the assent of creditors, shall not be necessary to a discharge, while in case of voluntary bankruptcy the proportion is lowered from fifty to thirty per cent, and instead of a majority in number and value of creditors, the assent of but one fourth in number, and one-third in value is made necessary. As we understand it, the provision here stated applys only to cases begun since December the first, 1873.'

The opinions of Chief Justice Waite in the celebrated North Carolina bond cases are published in full in the Augus number of the American Law Times and Reports In one of the cases an attempt was made to compel the State Treasurer to use the funds of the State appropriated for other purposes to pay the interest on certain bonds. The court refused the relief prayed for, and the bill was dismissed, The State had deposited certain bonds to secure the payment of certain other bonds which had come into the hands of the plaintiffs, who prayed that the bonds so deposited might be sold and the proceeds applied as contemplated. The impression was that, in order to sustain a decree, it would be necessary to make the State a party, which would be against the constitution of the United States. Chief Justice Waite, however, ruled otherwise, and the bonds which had been pledged were ordered to be sold unless the State made other provision to meet its obligations in the plaintiffs' possession.

A St Louis bummer relates with great glee how he carried his election: "I went to Tom, Dick and Harry," he said, "and said to each one of them, if I am elected I'll give you ten dollars; but you can get twenty dollars down from my opponents; take it and do as you like After getting the twenty dollars, you see, these fellows worked for me to get the other ten. That's what I call business."

This is the way it generaly is: Mrs Jones will remark to her undutiful son: "Why ain't you like Willie Brown?" Mrs. Brown will remark to her hopefull: "why ain't you like Jemmie Jones?" The boys have lots of fun laughing about it, especialy when they are stealing watermelons together.

Providence aldermen, it seems, are noticeable for the breadth of sole and the quantity of ground covered in their debates. One of them being called to order the othe day for some personal remarks, gravely informed the president that he couldn't help it if he stepped on some man's toes, he must put his feet down somewhare."

The attempt to substitute moral suasion for corporal punishment in the government of pupils in the public schools of Chicago has been entirely successful. The report of the School Board dwells upon this fact with pardonable complacency. Last year there were fewer suspensions, in propotion to the attendance than ever before. Nine schools, having an average attendance of 6,500, report no suspensions and no corporal punishment. Six schools, with an attendance of 4,500, report one suspention each.

It is an old saying that in Boston it is asked how much a man knows; and in New York, what is he worth; and in Philadelphia, who his father was. The Philadelphia Telegraph indirectly contradicts the theory embodied in the adage by alleging, in an articleon The True Greatness of Philadelphia" that it lies in the fact that it is a city of homes, where every reasonably skilful and industrious workman can five in his own house—an advantage attributable to the existance of nine thousand manufactories, employing one hundred and eighty five thousand hands.

The Graphic says: The best kind of a salesman for these dull times is an advertisement in a newspaper. It never tires in its labor, and never shrinks its duty; it talks to customers when they are in the best mood to be favorably impressed. it has access to the merchant, the scholar, the artist, the mechanic, and the farmer. It goes unquestioned into the most private and sacred of retreats. The lawyer listens to it while working up his case; the doctor drives into it when not divining diseases; the have it in their laps while leasurely lolling in their boudoirs. it is present in thousands of places at the same moment."

which can be cured by a timely resort to this standard preparation, as has been proved by the hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors. It is acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most reliable preparation ever introduced for the relief and cure of all Lung complaints, and is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years. When resorted to in season it seldom fails to effect a speedy cure in the most severe cases of Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Asthma, Colds, Sore Throat, Pains or Soreness in the Chest and Side, Liver Complaint, Bleeding at the Lungs, &c. Wistar's Balsam does not dry up a Cough, and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs, and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

With its issue for March 4, 1874, THE DAILY GRAPHIC entered upon the second year of a career phenomenal in the history of journalism. Its story of a twelvemonths has been a steady and unquestioned growth in popular acceptance as the most original, artistically luxurious, and wonderfully comprehensive metropolitan journal ever published in the United States.

As a brilliant novelty, the whole country has confessed its unique attraction; as a practical and marvellously complete Newspaper, it has become a daily necessity to the social and mercantile interests of one of the largest permanent constituencies ever attained by a journalistic enterprise in the same period, while its great specialty, beyond all actuality or hope of competition, as has been the wonder, delight, and new education of individuals and homes in every State of the Union. In the very idea of such utilization of the finest pictorial art, for every day's information and reflection, there is all the charm of a romance; and the realization of that idea, made visible in THE DAILY GRAPHIC, is a practical and ever-varying assimilation of the most fascinating Ornament with the commonest Use which never palls upon even the most pampered taste. From the first issue the successive multitude of its pictures has been a perfect study of mechanical and journalistic development; the inevitable early imperfections of artists and others, not yet thoroughly trained in the new process, disappearing steadily in an as steadily increasing accuracy and beauty of artistic effects. Indeed this very illustration, from day to day, of the Times, spirit of progress in Art, as well as in Events has been an added and piquant interest, which is yet to be maintained for the public by unending future "Graphic" improvements. Scarcely more, however, for its beautiful portraits, trenchant cartoons, vivid news-etching, and unequalled reproductions of the world's choicest works of art, than for its unrivalled attractions as has THE DAILY GRAPHIC been nationally recognized and popularly welcomed. Its genuine editorial independence, wide sweep of intelligence, ever-varying department of literary and persona interest, sparkling correspondence and pungent criticisms, make it as much a favorite in the sanctum of the great Western or Southern or Northern newspapers as in the counting-room and the family circle.

A SUPERB PICTORIAL MIRROR

DAILY HISTORY,

NEWS, SOCIETY, AND LITERATURE.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC is an Eight-page Paper, published every afternoon (three editions), in time for the early mails to all parts of the country.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC has a larger average circulation—more copies printed and sold each day—than any other evening paper in New York excepting only the [penny] NEWS.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC is a great newspaper, as well as the only illustrated daily paper. It has special correspondents everywhere, and it has a larger staff of writers and news-gatherers than any other evening paper in New York.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC is preserved for binding by hundreds of its readers in city and country. The annual subscriber gets a Pictorial History of the Year, a volume of twenty-four hundred pages, constituting a valuable record of events and a graphic panorama of our time and progress,

Local and Personal.

Judge ALBERTSON will hold Court in Perquimans county next week.

Gold at New York 109½, Cotton 17c. At Norfolk, cotton 15½, corn 88cts.

We have not yet received the official vote of the Senatorial and Judicial District, hence are unable to give the majorities.

The proposition to build a new Court House in this county was voted down at the recent election. There was no canvass whatever made in its favor.

A gentleman dropped a huge watermelon, just as he reached his gate with it, the other day. "Never mind, it may save you a doctor's bill," was the consolatory observation of a passer by.

A generous man can use sarcasm; it is the scorn felt by a true nature from what is base. But a sneer has always a vein of the ignoble in it, and a sneer at a fallen accomplice belongs to nature of the lowest grade.

Mr. MILLER, the contractor of our rail road, reports progress in his negotiations and arragements. He writes that he expects to return to Elizabeth City very soon, fully prepared to go on with the work.

The visitors and sojourners at Nag's Head are having a delightful time—eating, sleeping, bathing and enjoying themselves generally. Now is the time to go. The accommodations at the Hotel are excellent, the company is pleasant and everything is conducive to comfort and health.

Our Perquimans friend must excuse us from publishing his very flattering letter. Our modesty will not admit of it. It is true nevertheless, that when you want to find where the best apples are, go into the orchard and look for the tree under which you find the most clubs. There is no mistake about the rule. Let 'em pelt away at us.

A friend from Washington writes us that Hon. KENNETH RAYNOR is now in that city and is one of the Geneva Board. He is 66 years of age and begins to show the marks of time. He represented Hertford county in the Convention of 1836, in the House in 1835, '36, '37, '46, '47 and '50, the Senate in 1854 and this District in Congress from 1829 to 1845. His home is in Mississippi.

At a meeting of the "Independent Order of Rechabites," held at their hall on Tuesday night last, the following officers were elected for the term ending Dec, 8th: S—H. B. Coleman; P. C. R.—T. A. Commander; C. R.—Dr. Jos. Commander; D. R.—W. B. Wilder; R. S.—S. D. Bembury; F. S.—Newton Underwood; Treas.—C. B. Brothers; H.—G. W. Kesler; I. G.—R. A. Sawyer; O. G.—E. F. Sawyer.

It is a singular fact that in 1870 the counties composing this Congressional District there were 15 Democrats and only 4 Republicans in the Legislature In 1872 it was exactly reversed—15 Republicans and 4 Democrats In 1874 it changes back again to 15 Democrats and 4 Republicans. In 1870 it will be our pleasure and duty to help change it to its normal condition again, that of 1872. In 1870 the Democratic majority in these counties was 1,104. In 1872 the Republican majority was 1,460. In 1874 the Democratic majority is 1,431. In 1876 it will be all right again.

For the first time since the war the Democrats of this District have had a victory. They rejoice; it is natural. They look pleased; they have reason for it. The majority of them are jubilating; we wouldn't prevent it if we could. We know the causes; so do they. But no matter now. They have elected their ticket and let them burn as much powder and shout as lustily as they will. Here and there, however, we find a sober Democrat thoughtful and silent—refusing to join in the loud chorus. Said one of these the other day to some jubilant brethren: "Remembering '70 and '72 I confess that I feel afraid of the election of 1876." And well he may.

It is not indecorous for one man to ask of another that which is due him, nor for him to ask for aid and support in his legitimate calling. It is the immutable law of reciprocity. The Republic of industry is coequal and coexistent with the Democracy of endurance and effort and privation. We, like the rest of our brethren, must earn our bread by labor, by effort; the old injunction weighs upon all alike, and out of the commonality of that obligation we feel neither delicacy nor hesitancy in appealing to those who endorse the course of the NORTH CAROLIAN in its efforts to improve the condition and promote the material developement of the country to sustain it by making themselves more active in extending its circulation. There are hundreds of those in the District who could easily do this, and by doing so would accomplish incalculable good. We are industriously at work trying to faithfully do our part. Friends of Improvement and Progress! are you doing yours?

The Executive Committee of the Albemarle Agricultural Society will meet on Monday next, and among other things will decide upon the time of holding the Fair this Fall.

The original story sent us by "A New Contributor," though containing some excellent points, has too many imperfections for publication. We do not say this to discourage but to stimulate to a little more care and more practice. The theme, True Love, prolific as it is in thought and sentiment and all that, is nevertheless a reality. It ever has been, it always will be that and nothing else. Of all the myths of the fairy age, of its many legends and enchantments, true love is the one great charm which has come down to us unchanged by time, untouched by steam engines, and unexplained by science. Revenge may still exist with its daggers, and plashes, and melodramatic boots and teeth, but we feel little sympathy for it, and are glad to see it look more and more clumsy and out of place. Mystery is also somewhat oldfashioned, and its poor old veils are sadly torn about and darned, and its wonders and terrors exploded. But true love is true love by whatever signs and language it is spoken,—as long as hearts beat, as long as life exists, in whatever age, iron or golden, we may seek it.

A homicide occurred in Newland Township, this county, on Friday last. A colored man named NOAH PAILIN, from the neighborhood of Newbegun Creek, was on his way to visit some friend in the upper part of the county; On reaching the residence of DANIEL JENNINGS in Newland, he stopped and asked for some apples. These were given him. He sat down on the roadside to eat them, while JENRINGS hitched to a cart loaded with melons to take to a public gathering at the church. Both parties then started in opposite directions. Before going far JENNINGS saw PAILIN coming back. Thinking it suspicious, as both parties were strangers to each other, he went back and ordered PAILIN away. The latter claimed that he had dropped his tobacco where he sat eating his apples and come back to find it. Angry words ensued, JENNINGS ordering him off and PAILIN insisting that he had as much right on the public highway as JENNINGS had. JENNINGS then went to his house, got his gun, come back and after a further parley fired on PAILIN, the shot taking effect in his side. PAILIN was brought to town, his wound examined and pronounced fatal, He was removed to the Poor House, where his deposition was taken, He died on Saturday morning. JENNINGS voluntarily surrendered himself and is now in jail. We forbear making comments at this time.

AN UNWHOLESOME SEASON.—The closing days of winter and the early days of spring are very trying to the feeble and sensitive and are apt to affect unpleasantly even the more robust and vigorous. Nothing can be more depressing to the spirits than damp, chilling winds, fogs and cold rains, and of such unwelcome visitors we have a superabundance at this season. Common prudence suggest, therefore, the propriety of fortifying the system against these insidious enemies of health and comfort, and the experience of more than a quater of a century points to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as the all-sufficient sanitary safeguard under such untoward circumstances. An accession of vita, strength and energy is what is required to meet an overcome the unhealthy elements now present in the atmosphere. This increase of vital power, so necessary to meet the extraordinary drafts which an inclemen season makes upon the system and the constitution can be readily acquired by taking from two to three doses of Hostetter's Bitters daily during the winter and spring months The nature of this celebrated restorative is well known to the public It is composed of an absolutely pure diffusive stimulant, medicated with the extracts and juices o the most effective tonic, alterative, anti-bilious and laxative roots and herbs known to medical science To the combination of these xcellent ingredients, in propotions suitable to the exigencies of enfeebled, languid and diseased systems the great tonic-alterative owes its efficacy af a preventive and curative. A course of it commenced now will prevent all danger of fever and ague, rhenmatism or other ailments arising from damp peculiar to the spring months, and also prove a safeguard against the attacks of dyspepsia and liver complaint which so frequently occur at this period of the year.

TWO AMERICAN MAGAZINES.—

The excellence of AMERICAN MAGAZINES has become so well recognized abroad that one of the leading English Papers, the LONDON WEEKLY REGISTER, in a recent issue, thus speaks of SCRIBNER MONTHLY.

"We are constrained to own that SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY carries off the prize against all shilling monthly serials for brilliancy of illustrations and variety of contents. It is simply a wonderful shillen'sworth. Nothing can be more charming than the cuts,—full of force and vigor; the light and shade are managed with a truly artistic power. Out of its one and twenty original articles, we really do not know which to choose as best, for each and all are excellent."

Not only is it true that Scribner's Monthly excels the English Magazines, but it is "The Best of the American Monthlies."

In the extent, variety and artistic excellence of its illustration of American themes, it has never been even approached, much less excelled. It has a large page and gives a greater variety in its contents than any other of the Standard American Monthlies.

In literary character, and in the brilliancy and ability of its Editorial Departments, it enjoys an equal pre-eminence.

Its conductors started with the definite aim of making it the best magazine in the world, of which they have for a moment lost sight, and they point with pride and pleasure to the May and June numbers, recently issued and ask for them a candid examination and a careful comparison of their merits with those of other magazines; and they renew their pledge to the public to strive for still higher excellence in the future.

A considerable demand has recently arisen in England for Sir. Nicholas, Scribner's New magazine for boys and girls, one publish er desiring to secure an edition of three thousand of first bound volume (when completed) with his imprint.

The success of St. Nicholas in this country has been even more remarkable than that of Scribner's Monthly. It is pronounced to be "an ideally perfectagazine for children" re and, as is the case with all the best literature for children, it has been found to possess surpassing interest for grown-up readers, as well.

The influence of the periodicals of the day can scarcely be estimated, especially upon the rising generation. Parents and teachern cannot afford to be indifferent to this influence, or careless in relation to the character of the literature furnished to the children outside of their school lessons. In St. Nicholas not only are History, Natural Philosophy, Literature Fine Arts, and anufactures presentd in and attretrve way to young readers, but the children are stimulated to seek information for themselves,

The Publishers will send to any address a specimen number of St. Nicholas, postage pre-paid, on receipt of ten cents, the bare cost of paper and printing. The magazines are sold by all firstclass Booksellers and Newsdealers, everywhere.

Top-Dressing Grass Lands.

The success or failure of farming operations depends largely upon the mode and time of applying manure. No matter how applied, manure never fails to benefit the soil, and rarely fails to benefit the growing crop. But it may be used so that it will do comparatively little good either to soil or crop. In this section most of the rotted manure from barnyards in the Fall is used as top-dressing on wheat. The "patchy" appearance of top-dressed wheat, however, results from an attempt to make a small quantity of manure produce a crop on poor soil. To have the best effect on wheat manure should be applied on the surface some time before sowing, and thoroughly incorporated with the surface soil by frequent harrowing. But the best farmers in this section apply manure as top-dressing for grass lands and young clover. To produce its best effect clover should have as large a growth as possible. In a large growth the long top roots strike down deeper, and not only loosen the subsoil, but bring up fertilizing mineral elements that have leached down during years of shallow culture. Even if the clover be cut for hay the extra growth of roots leaves the land much richer than if no manure were used, and the entire crop plowed under. A good plan is to apply all the finer and well rotted portions of the manure to the young clover of this year's seeding. This will be washed down among the roots by Winter snows and Spring rains, and give the clover an early and vigorous start next season. Manures are much more apt to wash away on wheat fields than on clover, especially if the wheat has a small groth. This is one point which your able corispondent, Mr. Geddes, did not mention in his recent advice to a young farmer to top-dress wheat. While I agree that top-dressing wheat is generally beneficial, I think it still better to use the same amount of manure on clover. There is a temptation to apply the manure directly to wheat, for that is a crop which brings the money most readily. But if the land can be most benefited and after crops largely increased by top dressing clover that is the best policy.

It is rare that several loads of "scrapings" cannot be found at this season in barnyards. These should be drawn and spread on young clover. Even good rich soil from the roadside will pay to draw, if not too far. The droppings of cattle and horses should also be knocked to pieces in clover and other pasture fields. There is great advantage in this, even (or plaster) should always be sown on surface manured land. It is a specific manure for clover, and though not always uniformally beneficial, generally does enough good to warrant the small expense of applying it.—(W. J. F. Rochester, N. Y.

Pastures for Poultry.

We have a troop of adult breeding fowls loose in the farm yard; they pick up a large part of their living there. But they do not thrive so well and keep so healthy as other troops of breeding stock which we have stationed at houses purposely erected in grass-fields far from the homestead. For a very small sum you may erect a square board house, tarred outside, lime-washed inside, and covered with asphalted felt. Each of the four sides is in a separate piece, the roof (if of gable form) in two pieces, all knocked together at the corners with staples and pins. So a house, say six or seven feet cubic, can be placed into a cart and temporarily set up in a pasture, or on a stubble, or wherever there may be a good picking for the fowls. A couple of perches, a few nest, and a drinking-pan for the furniture, while the ground covered in by the house [for there is no wooden floor] is spread over with loose earth, ashes, and mortar. Such is the home of a cock and eight or ten hens and pullets during the breeding season, and the home of double the number of half-grown chickens. The house should be placed against a hedge, or in a corner where two hedges meet, so that a few poles or posts protect it against cattle. There can be no good reason against grazing fowls, as well as other animals, and the farmer who tries it for the first time will be surprized at the amount of grub (literally, perhaps) which the active scratchers and pickers will find in a grass field, in and under the droppings of sheep and cattle, among hedge-posts, upon ditch sides, and so on; only a small amount of grain being necessary twice a day. We wish that many farmers would take our advice—procurer what handy sort they most fancy, Cochins or Brahma, that endure close quarters; game that are strong old English birds Dorkings that like dry chalk and gravel countries; or, if you are in low or wet neighborhood, on a tenacious soil, put a Cochin cock to Dorking females (no cross breeds allowed for parents, mind, but get good blood and pure breeds,) and you will have hardihood in your chicks, as well as weight and quality in your couples for market. ### Hen Manure.

Hen manure is best used in compost with muck that is decomposed, say one part hen manure to three ot the muck. Never mix it till time to use it, and cover it soon after you drop it: It is a safe precaution to put little hoe full of dirt between the hen manure and the seed corn and drop it no faster than you cover it up. If in composting the muck contains much moisture it will cause fermentation and set the ammonia free, by the developement of heat. A bushel of good hen manure has been known to produce ten tons of beets. Always save every ounce of hen manure. It is worth about as much as guano if it is properly saved and husbanded; that is kept dry till it is to be used. It will benefit the corn drop to an extent almost equal in value to all the corn the hens will eat.—Mass. Ploughman.

Preserving Posts.

Take linseed oil, boil it, and mix it with charcoal dust until the mixture has the consistence of an ordinary paint Give to the post a single coat of the mixture or paint before planting them, and no farmer, even living to the age of patriarchs of old, will live long enough to see the same post rotten. Posts of soft wood thus prepared were removed after remaining seven years in earth, and were found as sound as when they were planted. The only precaution to take is to use only well dried post before covering them with the charcoal paint.—(Le Bien Public.

The Syracuse girls say the Maryland girls wont marry in the full of the moon, beleaving they would have ill luck through life, but a Massachusetts girl wouldn't let forty moons stop her ten seconds. And our New York girls marry whenever they please, too, with perfect im-moon-ity.

We sleep, but the loom of life never stops; and the pattern which was weaving when the sun went down will be weaving when it comes up to-morrow.

VINEGAR BITTERS

VEGETABLE FREE FROM ALCOHOL

PURELY CALIFORNIA

EUREKA

VINEGAR BITTERS

J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable Preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of Vinegar Bitters?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier, and a life-giving principle, a perfect Restorative and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of Vinegar Bitters in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs in Bilious Diseases.

In the treatment of Chronic Rheumatism, let the patient be assured that no medicine, no combination of medicines, and no alterative, however powerful, can reach the disease, until the blood is purified. Vinegar Bitters will do it. No one can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Grateful Thousands proclaim Vinegar Bitters the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to Dr. J. Walker's Vinegar Bitters, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Giddiness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc., etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, Walker's Vinegar Bitters have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of Walker's Vinegar Bitters occasionally.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics, will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Jaundice.—In all cases of jaundice, rest assured that your liver is not doing its work. The only sensible treatment is to promote the secretion of the bile and favor its removal. For this purpose use Vinegar Bitters.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

The Saturday Evening Post.

The Oldest and Best Story Paper Published.

Founded August 4th, A. D. 1821.

For more than half century the SATURDAY EVENING POST has been the

GREAT LITERARY WEEKLY

of the Country, and has ever born a widespread and unblemished reputation for the unsurpassed purity, refinement and excellence of the Serials, Sketches and Miscellaneous reading matter.

It is pre-eminently

THE BEST FAMILY PAPER

that is published in this county, from its never containing anything that would offend the feelings of any one, either in a religious or political sense, or that could not be read at any fireside without objection from the most fastidious.

The circulation of the Saturday Evening Post, though not quite so large perhaps, as its younger contemporaries, is not, like that of some of them, fluctuating. and too often short lived, but based upon the intrinsic merit of the paper itself, and not dependent on any extraneous influences, such as the popularity of individual writers, &c.

Good, however, as the Saturday Evening Post has been in the past, it is our intention to make it still better in the future, and with this object in view we will effect a marked improvement in every department of the paper and will call to our assistance writers of admitted ability and known reputation.

By increasing its former attractions, and adding many judicious and pleasing novelties by studying how to please and cultivate the popular taste, by increasing industry and enterprise, and by enlarged facilities, we hope to make new friends with each and every issue, and continue to maintain the claim of the Saturday Evening Post to its title of The Oldest and the Best of Family Story Papers.

THE GREAT BALOON.

You've heard about the great balloon,
In which Professor Wise
Proposed to go to Europe,
By sailing through the skies,
He proposed to show the people
A quicker way for trips
Than ever had been known before,
By sailing o'er in ships.

Well everything seemed lovely
Upon that Autumn day,
When they began to pump in gas
To bear the barge away.
They pumped and pumped with all their power,
And things seemed nigh adjusted—
When there came an awful crash,
And the mighth bubble busted.

It's ever thus in human life,
Go whereso'er we may,
The darkest night will oft succeed
The brightest, sunniest day.
There are exceptions to this rule,
Where all the days are fair,—
For one, go down to JOHNSON HALL,
You'll find things all right here.

We've thought it best in cases like this,
This little fact to mention;
You need not ferr that they'll inflate
Beyond their power of retention.
And when they undertake to go
Their geer's so well adjusted,
They'll move straigh forward to their work,
With no fear of being "busted."
